FACULTY SPOTLIGHT

I am originally from Bogotá, Colombia, and I moved to the United States to pursue my education and follow my lifelong dream of becoming a teacher. I earned my Bachelor's degree in Education from Lynn University.

I have been teaching for nine years, and from a very young age, I knew I wanted to make a difference in children's lives. Throughout my school years, I always chose to complete my community service hours working with children of all ages. Saturdays spent serving and supporting them were something I truly looked forward to, even then, I knew teaching was my calling.

After graduating, I did not focus on location or demographics, I simply wanted to teach. That passion led me to a Title I school, an experience that strengthened me tremendously as an educator. Since then, I have taught multiple grade levels, and with each new class, that grade somehow becomes my favorite. Every year brings new joy, new lessons, and new connections.

I truly believe teaching is a profession of the heart. My philosophy centers on creating a classroom where students feel safe, valued, and excited to learn. I strive to make learning engaging, meaningful, and joyful by incorporating creativity and connection into everything I do.

When students are having fun, they are more confident and willing to take risks. When they feel loved and supported, they grow not only academically but also in character. I believe in nurturing the whole child's mind, heart, and spirit, so they leave my classroom not just smarter, but stronger and kinder.

My proudest moments are not awards or milestones, they are the reunions. Seeing former students grow into confident, kind individuals and having them come back for a hug or to tell me how much they appreciated our time together fills my heart in ways I cannot describe.

To know that I once held their hand while they were learning and growing, and to witness the people they are becoming, that is the true reward of teaching.

While attending Lynn University, I was assigned observation hours at Unity School. From the very first day, I felt something special. Even as a college student, I felt welcomed, valued, and part of a true community.

I knew in my heart that one day I wanted to return, not as a student observer, but as a teacher. When the opportunity came during the COVID pandemic, it felt like everything aligned. Unity opened the door not only for me to grow professionally as an educator, but also for my own children Isabella, Sebastian, and Marcelo to be part of this incredible community. They truly love and enjoy being students here. It has been a blessing both personally

Unity is an extraordinary place. The sense of community, warmth, and genuine care is felt the moment you step on campus. Parents, students, and teachers support one another in meaningful ways. It is a place where every child is known, valued, and celebrated.

At Unity, students grow intellectually, emotionally, and spiritually. The school nurtures kindness, leadership, and a love for learning while shaping compassionate human beings. It is a community built on connection, purpose, and heart, and that is what makes it truly exceptional.
